Construction at the three neo-traditional townhouses at Strong Place and Kane Street in Cobble Hill is close to finished, and Curbed got the first look (<http://ny.curbed.com/archives/2014/08>)

which hit the market (http://brownstoner.wpengine.com/blog/2013/03/second-strong-place-townhouse-debuts/) last year at $4,475,000, is a 3,720-square-foot home with five bedrooms and 3.5 baths. That house entered contract

(http://brownstoner.wpengine.com/blog/2014/04/three-townhouses-rise-on-strong-place/) in April, and the two single-family brownstones at Nos. 2 and 4 have yet to be listed.

Both of those will measure 3,730 square feet and include five bedrooms and 3.5 baths, according to developer Brennan Realty (http://www.brennanrealtyservices.com/2014/08/strong-place-townhomes-nearing-completion/). Each home will feature a backyard, penthouse terraces and a double-height window wall at rear garden and parlor levels. Designed by CWB (http://cwbarchitects.com/), the homes are modeled after classic brick townhouses, but the insides are modern. Click through to see the interiors. What do you think of the design?
